HOT OR NOT

HOT: New stationery

WHAT could be more warming than the sight of new unchewed pencils, solid, chunky new pads of A4 lined paper, a new ring binder that shuts with a resounding click for a change, and that rarest of treats - a spanking new biro that no one has had the chance to 'borrow' yet.

Out of the few luxuries we allow ourselves at the start of a new term (on a par almost with that post-exam bevvie-blowout) is new stationery.

Notice the smug smile of satisfaction as the girl sat next to you proudly extracts a pristine pencil tin from her record bag, watch your mate grin as he brandishes his new ink pen like Luke flippin' Skywalker.

Yes, new paperguards and the like take us back to childhood...

We may have to attend horrid new lectures but, hey, that Rugrats ruler makes it all just that little bit more bearable; buy some today.

NOT: New term's resolutions

We've all been there. No really, I've seen the error of my ways. "Those exams, man, it all got a little too close for comfort. This term I'm going to do my background reading straight after the lecture; I'm not going to be late or miss any classes; I'm going to finish my essays before the night before; and I'm going to keep all my notes tidy and up-to-date in the new file I got for Christmas". A word of advice? Get real.

FILL YER BOOTS Bill Clinton

First there was JFK, the man whose legacy for philandering has cast doubt on what the F really stood for.

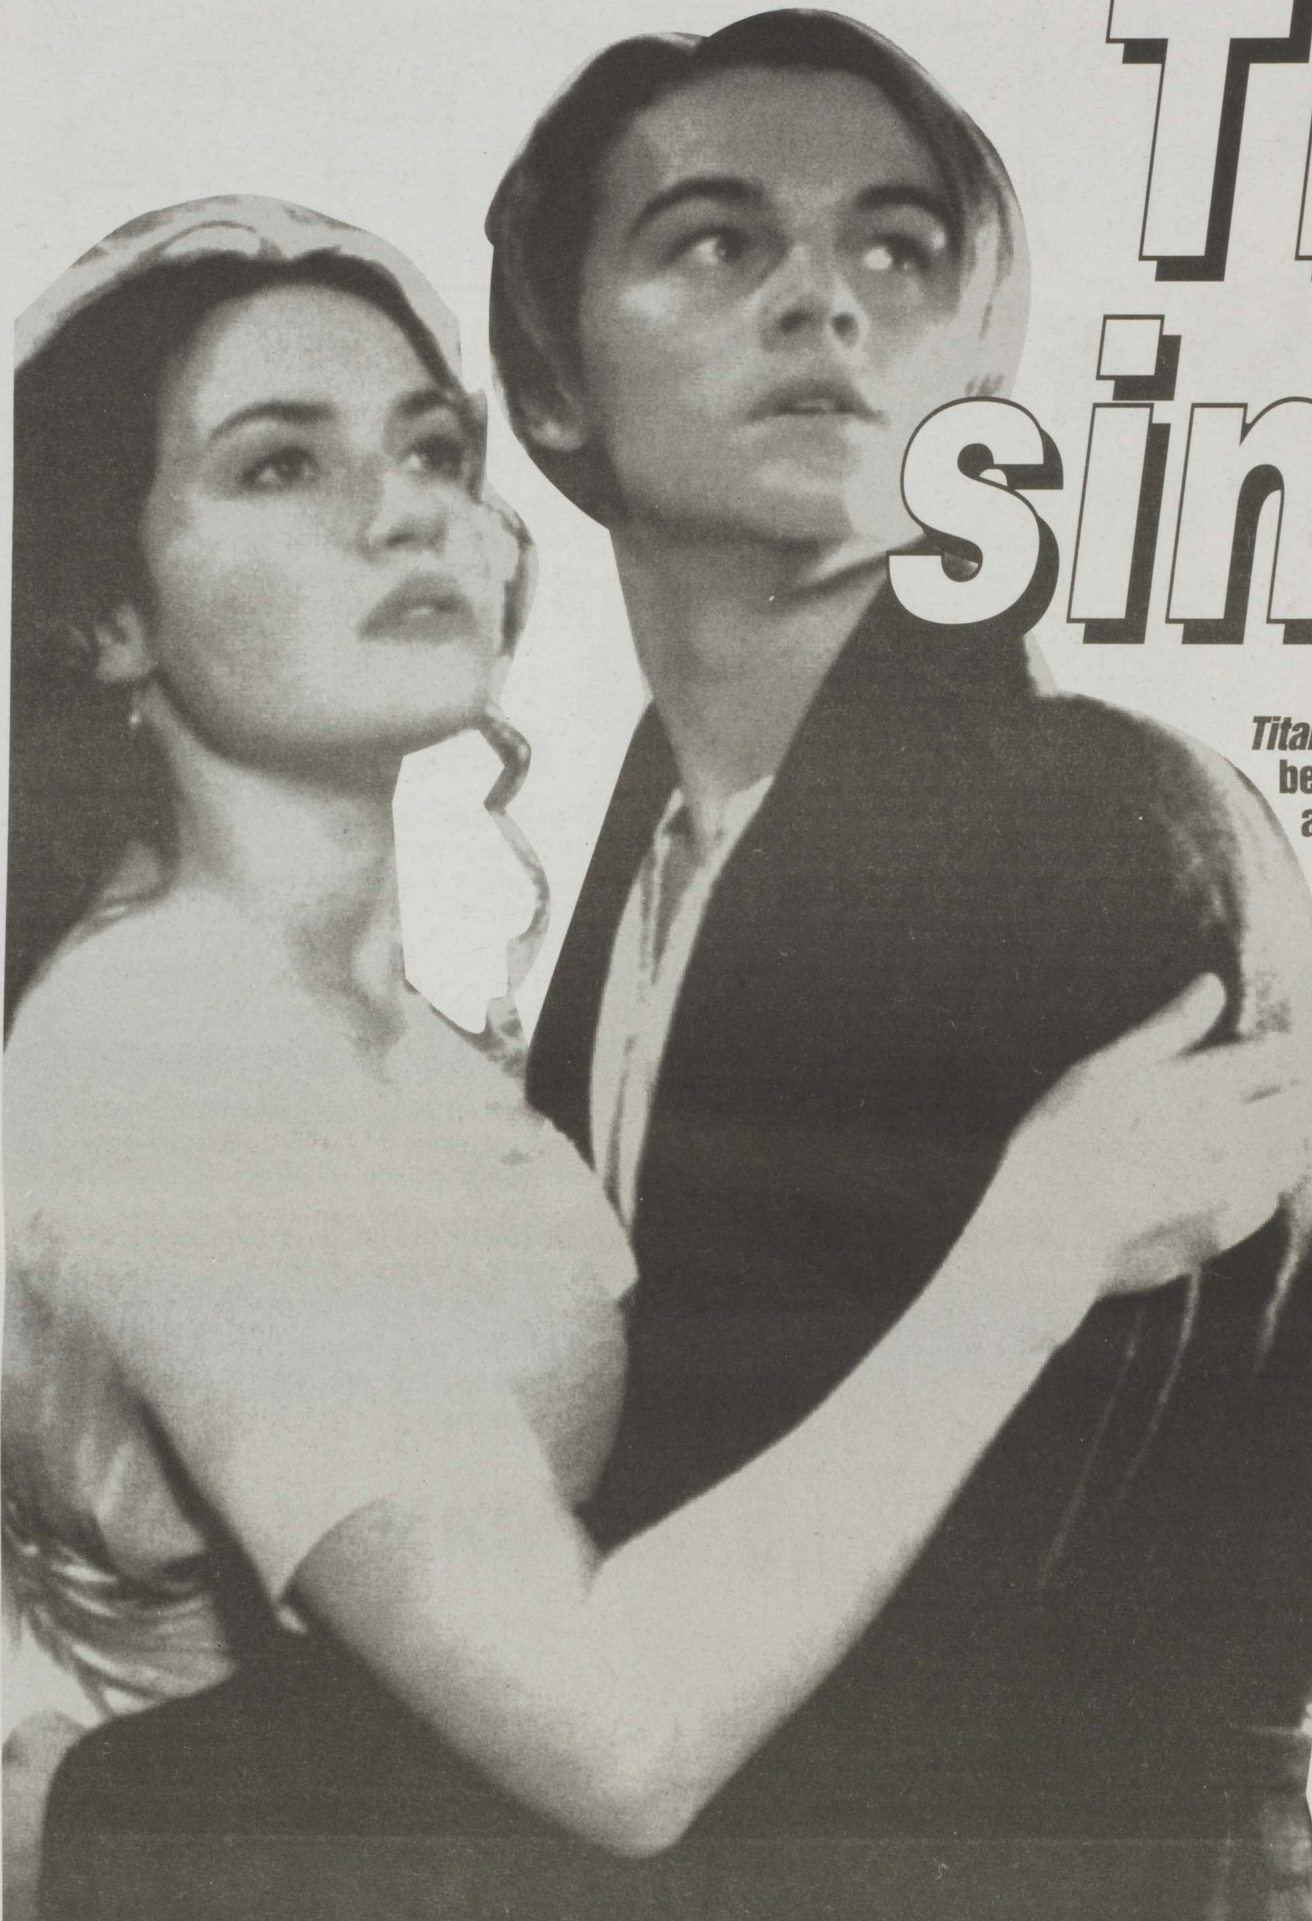

Then there was Richard "Tricky Dicky" Nixon, a genuine phenomenon. Being the most powerful man in the capitalist world never stopped him from swearing like a trooper or employing the kind of surveillance techniques that would have made Stalin brick himself. And Ronald Reagan didn't distinguish himself as a respectable world statesman. Now Big Bill Clinton has added his name to the Presidential hall of shame, with allegations of sexual wrongdoing and purdery involving a member of his White House staff. Look, the man was enjoying himself. Have you seen the state of his wife and daughter? Any man has to play away once in a while, leader of the Free World or not. So we say, fill yer boots, Bill, you deserve it.

Chris Straw

Phrase, colloquial. Meaning: to go ahead with something and fulfill one's potential (usually in dubious circumstances)

That sinking

Titanic has plunged through history by becoming the most expensive film ever made at a staggering cost of $200,000,000. CLARE LISTER sailed to the cinema to see if it rode high with the tide or was up ship creek without a paddle

WHEN dealing with a tragedy that killed 1500 people, changed the lives of many more, and became one of the most significant events of the first part of the century, one would imagine that a filmmaker would concentrate on something more than a banal love affair.

For entertainment's sake James Cameron, director of Titanic, invents a class-divisive and doomed romance to carry the action of the film for two hours before the iceberg finally hits. Kate Winslet plays Rose, a poor aristocrat with a stow of "someone Picasso's" paintings in her cabin, being married off to some clichéd toff, who delights in throwing over breakfast tables, and chasing her round a sinking ship with a loaded pistol.

She endeavours to throw herself overboard and is saved by poor, working class Jack, (Leonardo di Caprio) who not only won his ticket in a poorly enacted poker game with men of various nationalities, all sporting a dodgy accent, but for the whole film looks twelve years old. His one and only asset, which must be admitted is, in this case, rather handy, is that in the face of definite drowning in freezing water, he can keep complete and utter calm.

To avoid drowning in sentimentality, Cameron has created a titanic amount of special effects, many of immense proportion, and strikingly spectacular. At the beginning the modern day scientists recreate the sinking on a virtual reality computer, so that when the Titanic hits the iceberg, the audience knows that once the fifth deck is under, the ship is

Films that have made history

On December 28th 1895,

Arrival of a Train at Giotat Station, was the first film ever screened, lasted 4 minutes long, and was produced by brothers Auguste and Louis Lumiere. Former Parisian factory workers, don't ya know.

Where previously sound had only been produced alongside film, by an accompanying pianist, organist or speaker in the movie theatre, 1927 saw the historical evolution of the first ever 'Talkie',

The Jazz Singer,

which relaunched the career of singer Al Jolson

As far back as 70

B.C. there is evidence of hand drawn moving images.

The Zoetrope, Kinetoscope and the flip book furthered the experimentation with animation, but in 1937 Walt Disney's

Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs,

made history by becoming the first ever full length

feeling

doomed, and wait with baited breath for the ship to raise up, split into two, and plummet to the bottom of the ocean.

Perhaps Cameron ran out of his $250 million before he had perfected the details, but some of the effects look more like virtually real backdrops with plastic jumping dolphins than the Atlantic ocean. Evidently, though he lacked the ability to spend any money on a scriptwriter. Even overlooking the fact that Winslet gives a finger in 1912, and puts down the managing director of the ship at dinner, by remarking that "Dr Freud had something to say about size", answered with a "This Freud, is he a passenger?", Winslet and her boy scour the entire ship before finally 'making out' in the back of a car in the storage section, transcribed to the audience by unbelievably corny steamy windows.

The handling of the social divide is even more hammy, with Winslet cleverly working out before tragedy strikes, that there are only enough lifeboats for a quarter of the passengers and so only the aristocracy.

But Cameron explains that this doesn't matter, as beside the cramped conditions, and the swarms of rats, the poor have a wonderful time below deck, swigging down beer, and dancing away the night in a scene reminiscent of the staff quarters in Dirty Dancing, albeit a jig rather than a wiggle.

The most realistic words of the script are the watchman's on seeing the iceberg loom. "Fuck me" he shouts, distracted from staring at the canoodling lovers on deck. Cameron inserts this shout, at two hours into the film, to wake up those members of the audience who only came in to view the strobe lights which flash from more or less the moment the water gushes in, to the return to the present day which frames the story. So that's what the money went on. At least Cameron stuck to the original clichés too, having the band playing on as the ship goes down.

The end of the film reverts to 1997, with a very 'young'

101 year-old Rose telling her tale, and revealing that "a woman's heart is a deep ocean of memories" and through this, Cameron revealing that his film is a deep ocean of inanity.

SINGLES

Single of the Week

WARM JETS

NEVER NEVER (Wild)

Re-mixed and re-produced by Dave Bascombe and Paul Corkett, this soulful record is set to impress more than a few. This time around, Louis' romantic connection with Zoe Ball may well mean some decent press coverage, as will their involvement with the NME Brat Bus Tour. On this evidence, world domination beckons. Probably.

BENNET

HORSE'S MOUTH (Roadrunner)

This track is taken from Bennet's quirkily cool album Street Vs Science. It's more down-tempo than the punky pop-song "Mum's gone to Iceland", with a slightly dirge-like 'rock anthem' chorus. However, they do manage to redeem themselves by their mix of off-beat guitar chords and a glockenspiel during the verses. A truly valiant attempt at a change of direction.

SANTA CRUZ

ROCKET MAN (Coalition)

At the outset, Santa Cruz' second single points to a potentially bright future for the band. However, it soon descends into a Can-esque chorus to make even the indie of indie-kids roll their eyes in despair. Don't waste your money.

PRIMAL SCREAM

IF THEY MOVE, KILL 'EM (Creation)

Another outstanding track from the album Vanishing Point. The title is inspired by, and sampled, from the Western "The Wild Bunch" accompanied by eerie house-of-horror keyboard melodies. Although lacking the permanently spaced-out vocals of Bobbie Gillespie, it retains a mellowed-out vibe sprinkled, in places with the acidity of the sitar. It also includes a slightly disappointing remix by Kevin Shields of My Bloody Valentine fame.

SPIRITUALIZED

I THINK I'M IN LOVE (Dedicated)

Another high-as-you-like, wibbly-guitar-filled, genius track from the coolest band on the planet. It seems to catch the heady feeling of the songs' title and is possibly best experienced when in a state of extreme inebriation. And there's a fabulous Chemical Brothers' remix.

MADLOCKS

IN MY LIFE (Jah)

Had this been the eighties, when we all still looked upon rap as being a novel idea, this band may well have been a success. However, sounding like a Puff-Daddy reject, these days this is more likely to be seen as just shite.

Ian Brown
Unfinished Monkey
Business

Last summer the T&C was packed to the rafters to see John Squire... sorry, The Seahorses. No doubt about it, the audience wanted to capture a bit of the 'Roses magic, but all they got was a couple of catchy pop tunes and a lot of self-indulgent posturing. Perhaps the Madchester myth really was dead and buried.

Not quite. Biding his time after the almighty farce of Reading '96, Ian Brown has used his time out to sit down 'on the grass' in the sunshine with a few musically talented mates (Mani and Reni included) and knock out a few relaxed and contemplative ditties.

This is as near to the sound of the traditional Stone Roses as it gets (funny that...) - the lolloping melody, dizzy cymbals and smart bassline of "Can't See Me" to the familiar bongos, incessant tambourine and general toe-tapping shenanigans of "Corpses in Their Mouths" and the whispered vocals on "What Happened To Ya?" You can't beat the real thing, but you can give a shaggy-haired nod in the right direction.

But if it's slow head shaking, moody guitar, infectious tune and subtle genius you're after, then get your lugholes around "Nah Nah". Not such a foolish title when Ian explains "there's nothing more to say". This, not the recent single, is the real Star here. If this isn't hit single material, I'll eat my Reni hat.

The only disappointment (there's always one) is "Unfinished Monkey Business". Mr and Mrs Brown have obviously given young Ian a genuine 1980s Casio keyboard for Christmas. Thus the title track sees Ian proudly yet gingerly playing the same short tune over and over again; having selected 'Disco Beat 2' as the backing track. You can stop now Ian, you're upsetting the neighbours.

This album isn't groundbreaking stuff, it isn't The-Stone-Roses-minus-the-one-with-the-big-ego, and it certainly isn't the Third Coming. Instead, Unfinished Monkey Business is the work of a man casually confident and at peace with the world; an easy-going collection of thoughts to heal the wounds and go some way towards restoring The Faith. Nice one, top one, sorted.

Various Artists
Big Beat Elite Repeat
(Lacerba)

The influx of conveniently Christmas-timed compilation albums confirmed it. Big Beat was a big thing in 1997, and it looks to continue to be in 1998.

This may be because it's a breath of fresh air compared to the all-to-often banal and uninspiring current indie/rock/pop scene, or perhaps it's because, somewhere between your Radioheads and your Verves, people just wanna get up, dance and HAVE FUN!

However, ultimately, it's probably because Big Beat is not merely a new genre. Instead it's genre-hopping, combining hip hop, drum 'n' bass, house, northern soul and funk, to name but a few.

In fact, anything goes as long as it's loud, funky and in yer face. With such diversity in mind a compilation/mix album is the perfect way to showcase the glorious nineties mix match that is Big Beat.

The funk of Jean Jacques Perrey's "E.V.A." (y'know- the one off the Lucozade ad) is brought quite stunningly up to date by remix maestro Norman Cook, adding scratches that would envy. The Allstars playfully open "Kool Rok Bass" before going on to break into mayhem with their frighteningly addictive take on, erm... well everything really.

Fidelity

But, the ultimate highlight of CD1 is Fat Boy Slim's mix of Midfield General's "Devil in a Sports Shirt" (undoubtedly a single of 1997). The disorganised chaos and wicked basslines make it engaging, aggressive and above all completely mental.

CD2 continues in much the same vein, with liberally scattered funky samples and cool tunes which buzz around your head with little respect for your sanity.

The Chemical Brothers go to work in their usual ferocious style on Primal Scream's "Burning Wheel", and never has a song been so aptly titled as Rasmus' "Mass Hysteria".

When it comes down to it, Big Beat Elite Repeat is (or should be) the ultimate party album, guiding you through over three hours of hedonistic fun. However, for all its playful cheekiness, the Big Beat album proves that Big Beat the genre is actually important.

The greatest thing about music is the infinite number of possibilities it holds, and the greatest thrill always comes when it moves forward, exploring new sounds and discovering unknown pleasures. Many Big Beat tunes manage not only to do this, but to do it in a highly accessible style.

The future must no longer be determined by the past. Big Beat has well and truly carved the way forward.

Air
Moon Safari

A friend wandered into the room while Air's Moon Safari was on and asked me why I was listening to porn music. Well, I'm not quite sure what kind of films he's been watching because it's not quite porn music, but it is very sexy indeed.

Last year's French house compilation Super Discount, by Etienne de Crecy, featured amongst its splendid wares a sweeping little epic called "Soldissimo" by Air. Now the Parisian duo have followed this up with their debut LP, and rather magnifique it is too.

Using practically every kind of electronic instrument from the past twenty years, and a few real ones as well, the two young men have put together a wonderfully escapist album that combines the kitsch and the Korg to great effect.

It sounds something like St Etienne crossed with a bit of Orbital and Serge Gainsbourg (you know, of legendary '60s shagging song Je t'aime), but it's all the better for it.

Even the electronic voicebox vocals which accompany several of the tracks (including the standout 'Remember' and single 'Sexy Boy') can't detract from the melodic dance that Air create. It does seem a little too Barbarella at first, but what is strange soon becomes subtly funky, making this album a great one to absorb when you're lounging about.

Undeniably European, but light years away from Europop and not as daft as Daft Punk; Moon Safari is a bit of French electrified easy listening cheesy soundtrack music. Tres bien.

A Piece of the Action

Occasionally books of a slightly different nature land at our doorstep. Lo and behold we have received two such books this week. Deadly Fighting Skills of the World has chapters covering everything violent from Strikes & Blows, Assassination, Sabotage & Booby Traps to Night Fighting.

Could there, I pondered, be anything that will appeal to our regular readers? Well, hypothetically yes. You are, for example, making your way across Woodhouse Moor when you are approached by a mugger with a machete. Do you a) Turn heel and run away, or b) Recall that "The machete is a useful tool for jungle operations, having a long blade and being significantly heavier than a knife. However as a tool for close-quarter killing it leaves a lot to be desired."

Emboldened you mentally run through the techniques of the Russian Spetsnaz elite soldier and administer a kick to the groin before 'going in for the kill.' But hopefully you chose answer a.

Is there anything in the book that will enable you to wage a more successful campaign against that scourge of student life, the one who steals your cheese? Here the book exceeds itself and with a little imagination an answer is at hand.

The simple grenade booby trap can be customised thus; At the entrance to the kitchen simply affix, using brackets, an open ended baked bean tin close to the floor and facing across the entrance. Extend a trip wire across the entrance and attach to a grenade which is then placed in the tin. When the offending leg walks into the wire it will pull and trigger the grenade which will destroy everything within a six hundred foot area.

Again there lies the book's downfall. The author refers to grenades as simple, when they are anything but. Nor, is it a simple matter to remove your sock in a fight, locate sand or gravel and fashion a cosh to brain your assailant.

As a text book for our fighting men it is perhaps a little watered down. As a reference book for the more extrovert criminal, a little uninspiring, and as a book for your coffee table little more than an amusing talking point.

On the plus side Deadly Fighting Skills does in fact furnish you with plenty of facts, techniques and interesting pictures and illustrations. It is written with absolutely no sensationalism which is both refreshing, yet a little creepy when you remember that the span bridge you just blew up resulted in countless injuries and deaths.

Finally, "A simple finger jab can, at worst, knock an eye-ball out of its socket." Simple.

If you fancy a bit of close-combat fighting this weekend (other than with your bank manager), you could do a lot worse than reading The Whites of Their Eyes.

Based on real-life situations, this book details how close-combat fighting has evolved since the beginning of the century. It highlights some of the great and not so great achievements of British, French, German and American infantrymen in battle and shows how the infantryman's lot isn't all mud-stripped faces and chunky guns.

Roger Ford demonstrates that even carrying more than his own body-weight in equipment and fighting a battle at the same time is only a small part of the soldier's job.

At first look it seems like another of the Bravo-Two-Zero spin-offs but upon closer inspection it turns out to be detailed and informative rather than entertainment for action man wannabees. It spans several different conflicts and a multitude of close-contact fighting techniques from hostage rescue to tunnel fighting.

Even for the most war-hungry of readers, this book may prove to be a little dry and fact-based so don't expect to be carried away by any Rambo-style excitement.

Fortunately though, The Whites of Their Eyes is scattered with admittedly not-so-pretty pictures which should keep your interest ticking over.

The Penguin Press have created a completely diverse collection of poetry and prose for Night Thoughts. Rather than reviewing critically, (or otherwise), a few points sell this book immediately.

The price is incredibly cheap (£2.99), of which one pound can be redeemed against your next Penguin Classic. Possibly the greatest advantage to most students is that each extract is sourced to original Penguin publications.

The introduction written by the editor, Simon Winder, traces the genre of 'night writers' through the ages. It is therefore not surprising that Shakespeare features regularly throughout.

The inclusion of pieces by Mary Wollstonecroft and Emily Bronte are certainly welcome. A notable absence is the lack of other well known female authors.

reflection and solitude. These concepts do not necessarily appear appropriate when thinking about a number of my contemporaries. Most students leaving clubs or the union bar are normally left feeling ethereal. The former condition not being conducive to any serious contemplation of deep prose and poetry.

My final thoughts on the book are simple. If you need a quick read which is as easy to pick up as to put down, then go buy one. A health warning would be; if you drink too much, suffer depression, or have a low boredom threshold, avoid this book.

FICTION

Vladimir Nabokov
The Enchanter
Picador £5.99

The opening shot of this book is Nabokov's admission that prior to writing his famous Lolita he had formed an idea for a book in 1939. Sadly he reflected that the novella which he subsequently typed was lost. It was, however, merely mislaid and Nabokov duly sent the newly found manuscript to the publishers.

This then is a pre-Lolita delve into the mind of a madman, one obsessed with the desire to rule, through his paedophilic nature, a young girl.

At first glance, the book is an amusing tale of a middle aged jeweller trying to concoct situations where he may steal time with the victim. Descending into near farce when he sets out his stall, to marry the girls sick widowed mother, he awaits her demise, either manufactured or naturally. Through his attempts to speed up the process the novella at once shows up the nature of chances lost and gained due to external influences.

The upshot of this short tale is the furtive attempts of a sick and twisted child molester to manipulate for his own ends, the destruction of innocence.

The end comes swiftly and not to his satisfaction, when on taking his young charge on a long sojourn ends up in a double bed with her asleep next to him. Overcome with temptation, he lets down the guard which he has, till then rigorously applied and is sent running into the night by horrified hotel guests. There the story ends but it is taken up by his son Dmitri in the afterword. Denying that the book is another Lolita he adds that the book is really an exercise in suspense. The sense that reality will always betray the dream. If this is heavy, at least it gives a background to the man who went on to write one of the most influential books this century.

SKATING

Torvill and Dean eat your hearts out, the Ice Warriors are here

Ice Skating. We've all tried it. Everyone has strapped on those ill-fitting, blister and ankle-pain inducing skates provided at every municipal ice rink.

Every one of us has slithered skittishly round the edge of the ice, half clinging to the barrier before making off into the centre of the rink for a spectacular double salko with fall onto arse. We all know in our hearts that ice skating is trickier than it looks, cold, painful and has little else to recommend it.

Why then do ITV think we want Ice Warriors (Gladiators on ice, Torvill and Dean crossed with Dungeons and Dragons). Who thought it would be a good idea? The unfortunate fact of the matter is that Ice Warriors is here and on our screens when we least need it.

The late Saturday afternoon schedule is a narrow tightrope to be walked. Before Blind Date the audience begins to settle down and take in some light entertainment. Now here I can see the logic behind Ice Warriors; this particular timespot has regularly been filled by the more bizarre programmes and they are usually hugely popular. The A Team, Knight rider and Superman have all satisfied our twisted desires before now but I fear a mistake has been made. Ice Warriors is not going to be popular. Listen to me, do not watch it. I know there is nothing else on but save yourselves from this expensive travesty.

The show starts with flashy (but tacky) graphics and a mock-scary voice-over informing us that we have been transported into the future where everything has frozen over and the land is ruled by the Ice Warriors and

Dani Behr, who have come "not to fight, but to excel". Well, I remained firmly on my couch and, though it was rather chilly, my world certainly hadn't frozen over. We are introduced to all of this by the Ice Master. Like all the characters he is dressed ridiculously lots of leather and what appear to be lots of mobile phone cases. He probably uses them to keep snacks in for the more boring parts of the proceedings (good job he has got room for a lot of snacks). The part is played by a chap who used to be a marketing boss for Walls Ice Cream and Birds Eye Frozen foods, so at least he was used to he cold conditions on the 'ice plane' (communal garden ice rink to you and me). Unfortunately I think they only employed him for his imposing demeanour and deep voice not his ability to appreciate the daftness of the situation he is in. To add to the comedy factor he has to patrol the ice rink on a specially-adapted ice motorbike-more born slippery than easy rider.

The Ice Master is not the only Ice Warrior blessed with a costume which looks like it was left over from an Iron Maiden album cover. There are enough shoulder pads, dodgy helmets and latex to put most of Soho out of business.

HERE begins one of Ice Warriors major failings. Unlike Gladiators, where we get to see barely clothed super-people cavorting on big puffy mattresses, we get well padded ex-construction workers and receptionists skating quickly and precariously on hard ice. Both the Warriors and the contestants are fairly character free. Despite the cheesy voiceovers informing us of the mythical pasts of the terrifying Warriors it is fairly clear most of them are straight off the building site.

You certainly don't get the post games banter Gladiators has made a dubious art out of. Most of the time they aren't allowed to take their helmets off for fear someone will recognise them as the one who botched their plumbing last summer. And so look at them glide across the ice these faceless fiends who "came from nowhere, their pasts shrouded in mystery" and hope they go back there soon.

Crunch, there goes another one falling on their arse.

Here is another problem, the falling over, it

THE GAMES

STRETCH A tug of war between two challengers attached by bungee cord. Totally unfair game due to different skates used and the sort of thing you get at kids parties.

PORCUPINE Basically a giant dust cart on ice with a goal on the back. Two Ice Warriors defend it, whilst a team of three attackers try to score without being thrown out with the trash.

SCYTHE A 4 lap relay race where contestants jump over and dive under moving scythes trying not to lose any limbs or get be-headed.

ZERO DEGREES The zero degree wheel is pushed around by a couple of warriors trying to break the contender's legs whilst they dart in and out to score credits.

BOULDERBALL Balls are the important feature in this game. Two teams of four aim to score in each other's goal using a huge two metre metal ball. Sounds a bit more like a demolition to me.

POLAR PURSUIT Equivalent to the Gladiator's Eliminator, but nowhere near as exciting. Blokes in crash helmets chasing each other... must be some kind of fetish.

GLADIATORS v ICE WARRIORS

Ten reasons why Gladiators is better than Ice Warriors

1. Glads wear skimpy costumes, Icers are too padded up to be sexy.
2. Icers have no characters you love to hate like Wolf.
3. Ulrika can present coherently unlike Dani.
4. Ice warriors is too specialised-you have to be able to skate to relate.
5. Instead of hard cash and a jeep, winners on Ice Warriors get a dodgy holiday.
6. Ice skaters aren't as hunky as Glads.
7. No one can rival Glads referee John Anderson's reprimands and accent.
8. Ice Warriors are too lenient on the contestants-Glads show no mercy.
9. The Icers are impossible to recognise through their costumes.
10. The Ice Warriors audience don't have "Glad hands".

Vital Signs

With the cold weather there is the usual bed crisis at the TV hospital. However some of the patients are more bed ridden than others.

The best programmes are unaffected by the snow, sleet and ice, but others are driven slowly crazy by the rhythmic pitter-patter of falling snow but do they deserve a warm reception or the cold shoulder?

ON THIN ICE

happens a lot. In fact most of the 'games' are based around falling over and not much else. Now I know they are restricted in what they can do by virtue of being on ice but shouldn't they have thought of that earlier? By the time the contestants have finished the first game they are probably so bruised and battered that they can't sit down for a week. There must have been at least a few bones broken during the course of filming the series. The speed of the games and the hardness of the ice means that any sadists in the audience will have a pleasant treat when skaters inevitably come a cropper.

Then there's presenter Dani Behr, droning on like a bee in a blender to the embarrassed audience. Skate diva or frigid ice queen? The programme makers have obviously chosen her and her nearly non-existent costume to appeal to the bored British male population. And, believe me, if they're watching this, they must be bloody bored.

Co-presenter Schnapps, a former plumber from Cheadle turned dancing ice goblin, must jiggle his prosthetic head constantly to ensure realistic facial movements. Apparently, Ms Behr has the same problem.

So next time you're in the pub on a Saturday night and someone asks "Do you want ice with that?" just hope there isn't a big screen TV behind you.

BEHR FACTS

Three people took six weeks to do 93 drawings of Dani Behr and the Ice Warriors' costumes - she just wasn't happy with the likeness.

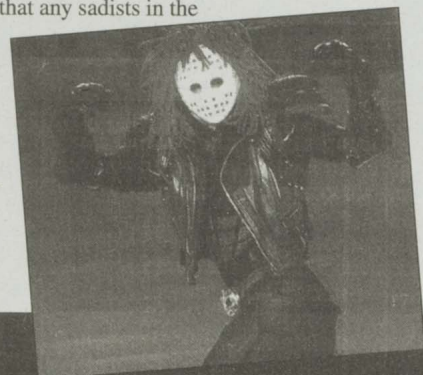

It took more than 50 people a total of 13 days, working day and night, to squeeze Dani into her leather basque.

Nearly 500 microphones are used to record the programme in Dolby-surround sound. Unfortunately you can still hear Dani Behr's voice.

The costumes were designed by special effects specialists at Pinewood Studios all of whom were big Def Leppard fans with a leather fetish.

A total of 400 cubic metres of polystyrene and six tonnes of plaster were used in the constitution of Dani Behr's make up.

Dani Behr lied to get the job as presenter, claiming she could skate when she couldn't. She also said she could present TV programmes.

Lively The up and about show this week is Looking After Jo Jo starring Robert Carlyle. The classic soundtrack has been broadcast on TV hospital radio for the last three weeks. Catch the last episode in the four part series about a loyable rogue turned drug dealer.

Life support The TV hospital food has been even worse this week as a new series called Chef School has arrived on the ward. As we all know a typical student's diet is beans and noodles, so why are they pretending to be any different?

Lost it If you're thinking of visiting the TV hospital chapel then watch out for the ritual granny-bashing. ITV's Sunday Morning Worship shows helpless old ladies being violently baptised by vicious vicars in the interests of religion.

Cerys on The Verve

THE PRINCESS OF WALES

Catatonia have become overnight Pop! sensations largely thanks to a single about the X-Files and Cerys' big mouth. She sings like a woman possessed (that's cos she is), and talks it like she walks it. Slagging off Cast? We like this lady! Cussing The Verve? Steady, girl! JOSEPH DOWNIE takes Cerys "Spooky" Matthews and Co to task

If at the Brit Awards, or even the Brats, there was an award for the hardest working band in pop, Catatonia would win it every time.

They've been touring almost non-stop since they got together as a band in 1992 - only taking time out to record their acclaimed debut album Way Beyond Blue, and more recently, the second long-player, International Velvet.

So it was somewhat inevitable that when I finally caught up with Cerys Matthews (vocals) and Aled Richards (drums) it was not at some swanky hotel, but backstage at a soon to be packed-to-the-proverbial-rafters Joseph's Well.

And this, in the second week of January, a time when most bands are still nursing hangovers. Why aren't you still tucked up in bed, then, Cerys? "Cos we've got a brilliant new album to promote, and a new single as well. We've always been busy around the January period."

The new single Cerys refers to is "Mulder and Scully", a plea to the inquisitive couple to try and unravel the mystery of love, and a new entry in the hit parade at a quite staggering number three (outselling Oasis, by the way).

Are you excited by chart success? "It's quite funny really how things are progressing at the moment. It's been a gradual process though, and not one we haven't enjoyed."

Sure, there's some truth to the saying that a recording of Noel Gallagher farting could get to number one in the 'slack' month of January (and, er, it did), but take nothing away from their success.

Is the new album more of the same? "Yeah, it's more of the same, but done better" asserts Cerys. "On the last album we didn't have the same line-up or producers. This time we did it with the same line up, the same studio - Monnow Valley in Monmouth - and the same producer, Tommy D (who's credits include A Tribe Called Quest and The Sugarcubes), and he helped us achieve what we were trying to do on the first album, like basing songs on a loop, and also getting a better vibe on the live based songs."

"We've still got the rock '1, 2, 3, 4, and in' shouty songs, we've still got the ballads, we've still got the spooky stuff, and we've also got the weirder stuff which we've done much better on this album."

"We've also got a sing-along, clap-around-the-bonfire number which we recorded down by the river with some very long leads. If you listen carefully you can hear the river."

"And", chirps Aled, "you can hear the birds singing too."

Are you proud of it? "It's a great album and I'm very proud of it. It's like throwing darts and just seeing which one's stick, you know what I mean. People say, 'Oh yeah, Catatonia, they're an indie band', but I like to think we're a bit more classy than that!"

You steered clear of Britpop ("or Britpop steered clear of us" interjects Cerys), so is it quite fortunate that britpop is officially no more? "We've always been kind of branded as misfits that nobody could really put their fingers on. People who've been into us for a while, I think they like the silly little things like the b-sides, songs like "Tourist" and "All Girls Are Fly".

Through constant touring, there are certainly quite a few people who are into Catatonia. Already half the fans at the evening's gig are singing along to the chorus of the title track of the new album International Velvet. It goes, "Everyday, when I wake up, I thank the Lord I'm Welsh". Is this you laying your cards on the table - is being Welsh important to the band? "The importance is in the familiarity. We in this band are Welsh, but every person (all) around the world, in cities, towns or villages, they've got their own familiarity." "But" adds Aled, "it's a double edged thing cos we're singing how great it is to be Welsh in English."

Cerys' and Mark Roberts' (guitar) lyrics have always been pretty caustic, as anyone who still remembers their first great single "Bleed" will testify. Are the lyrics still important to you? "Definitely, yes, especially considering the lack of good lyrics around at the moment. There's some top ways of writing stuff, like the way Smokey Robinson writes, and I think Mark is pretty hot at writing top lyrics."

"I mean, there are so many things you can say. The biggest culprit for bad lyrics is Cast; I'm sorry, they've got some lovely tunes, but baby, stay in and write some good stuff. Take away 'mine', 'sky', 'time' and 'high', and you'd be left with 'and'!" It's a more than fair point, and according to Aled is because "they have a four year old dog, no seriously, that makes up the rhymes."

What, apart from Cast obviously, do you like listening to at the moment? "All Saints, Spice Girls, Robbie Williams, Missy Elliot, Midfield General", lists Cerys. "We all like different stuff, there's no room for snobbery in music, and I think that's what we've all got in common."

Alec adds, philosophically, "If it's good, it's good. There's good, and there's shit." Cerys, warming to the theme, continues, "It's like The Verve, I mean, they've written a couple of good singles, but I don't wanna hear people jamming, you should keep that to your bedroom."

"Elvis Presley would have said to them 'Where's the tunes, boys' - not about the singles, don't get me wrong, but about the other stuff. And as for the b-sides, don't take the piss, d'you know what I mean?! I think I'd rather listen to Celine Dion... or actually, perhaps not!"

This is your third time (at least) in Leeds; can you still remember all the different towns and gigs you've played? "I remember when we played the Duchess with Marion" confides Cerys, "and I had to push Jamie away from the mirror. I was, like, 'c'mon, there's a girl around here, baby!' to him."

It's certainly an enduring image, Ron, but not as enduring as the long overdue success of Catatonia will be. Proof that there is some justice in the world after all.

"Mulder and Scully" is out there somewhere (well, a record shop, actually) now. The arrival of new album International Velvet is expected imminently. Both available through blanco y negro / w.e.a. records.

FREAK POWER!!!

Catatonia aren't the first band to dabble in ways of the occult

David Bowie

Mulder and Scully may think they've got trouble with extra terrestrials, conspiracy theories, and genetic mutants. They would've really freaked out had they seen the Thin White Duke in 1974. Scary.

Babylon Zoo

After their Number One smash "Spaceman", Jas Mann insisted the Birmingham glamsters wouldn't be one-hit-wonders. Nothing has been heard of them since. A definite X-File contender, the only possible explanation is alien abduction.

Ray Parker Jr.

"If there's somethin' strange in your neighbourhood/Who you gonna call?" Undisputed single of 1984, cunningly stealing from the BBC's Rentaghost song. Who else had nightmares about the Marshmallow man?

CLASSIFIEDS

No classifieds this week due to computer crash.

Lisa: I'm not the most unreliable man in the world, I promise. You just catch me at the wrong time! See you soon.

Suzi: In the words of The Supernaturals: You've got to smile (but not on Thursday nights). Cool to see you again.

Aviva: Sorry I missed your birthday. I'm bad.

Right. I have too many apologies to make, so hopefully you'll understand that it wasn't my fault... honest! To all those who battled in vain, you may yet see your pages again, but it's going to be a 'case of Mulder and Scully' to find them!

Full service will be resumed as soon as possible, I (sort of) promise. Jim Evans: we salute you sir. Thanks for all you did - just cos you couldn't be bothered to buy your own tv guide! Elections tonight: Good luck again to all those standing and to all those voting: Be Here Now (well, at 5.00) please. The thirteenth issue... unlucky for some.

Carter the unstoppable sex machine

Jon Carter @ It's Obvious

The mood at Obvious tonight should be much improved, and the Warehouse rammed, as Carter's appearances behind the decks inevitably bring with them blinding tunes and a chaotic party atmosphere.

became a face at the original Heavenly Social, epitomising both its eclectic tastes and hedonistic outlook. And, as the force behind Monkey Mafia, he's been responsible for some of the scene's defining moments. Expect "Wede Man", "Here Comes The Hot-Stepper" and "Super Sharp Shooter". Expect him, basically, to blow the whole joint up. Jo Cairns

STARSIGNS

ARIES: The Christmas hols look likely to be a laugh, what with escapades to foreign lands, and a much loved activity. You will probably have a great few weeks, with only a little work, and this will put you in top spirits which will mean that you will feel renewed, revitalised, and full of love. The future looks bright.

Scorpio: You have had a really swell time recently, but are still looking forward to a few home comforts. Your holidays look riveted in one place, but that does not mean you will not be having fun. In fact that romance just continues to blossom and a new relationship looms in the new year.

Capricorn: Things are picking up gradually and a loved one proves that day be day you will fall more and more in love. Your only problem is your cashflow, which after Christmas may look a little delapidated. Do eat lots.

Libra: There may be a lot of work coming up in the near future, but a new co-worker ensures that you have a laugh and enjoy it a good deal more. After the successes of this week, you feel lightened and more joyful.

Aquarius: So you have accomplished more or less what you set out to accomplish over the past couple of weeks. The only problem is that the holidays stretch on for ages, and you aren't enjoying them as much as you should due to some health difficulties.

SAGITTARIUS: After a brilliant week things settle down a little, and you again resume that hectic lifestyle. Will it ever rest? What you have to ask yourself is whether it is have you thanked everyone around you recently, and what exactly is the state of your bank account.

Gemini: Goodness you are in for a really big and amazing treat. You are feeling amazing, and this is reflected in everyone around you who seems to feel the same. The party mood is on and swinging and life is cool.

Pisces: You have survived what you thought would be a really difficult term, and should feel really proud of your achievements. Remember that other people are not judging you, and that you should not bother about what they say.

Taurus: Perhaps you should be thinking about helping others a little more, rather than being so selfish. You are not thinking at all and that is not a good character trait. Buck up your ideas.

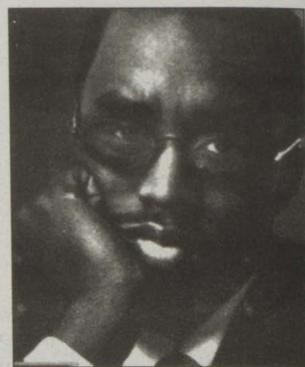

Virgo: You have had a good term in retrospect, and next term will be even better. Try something new this holiday, and keep working at that relationship. It's going to need it. Think about fluffiness.

Cancer: You are going to be made very happy soon after helping to make someone else very happy recently. You should also start having a good time yourself and thinking about you. You are a very caring person.

LEO: Well it is time to surmise this term. After the hectic meeting of deadlines recently you are worn out, but that should not stop you having a little bit of fun, and get the spirit back again. Escape all drudgery and have a good Christmas. Or else.

The Yardbird Suite @ The Underground

The Underground has been selected as one of the top ten clubs in the UK - "according to an article one of my mates read in a London magazine". That is reason enough to go down on any night of the week. However, Saturdays are something special. There is a live jazz band pumping out the grooves for the first part of the night. Then, the DJ takes to the turntables and mixes the hours away in an eclectic mixture of funky jazz and foot-tapping rhythms. This is the place that draws the cream of Leeds clubbers; the bouncers are even friendly for a change. I recommend you get a bottle of wine from the bar and find a seat at a table. Then soak up the atmosphere and the alcohol before strutting your stuff. Dress with style and take a big cigar in your top pocket. Rob Dunthan

FEBRUARY 1 SUNDAY

Faith In Our Time @ 12 noon, ITV

ITV unveils its latest ratings rival to BBC2's Simpsons omnibus in the shape of a new six-part series in which everyone's favourite TV presenter and sexually explicit novelist, Melvyn Bragg, interviews important figures from different religious faiths in Britain.

In today's crucial pilot episode, the Archbishop of Canterbury, George "Smokin'" Carey, talks about his early years, Christian awakening and the absolute certainty of the New Testament as the ultimate Word of God.

One to watch, then, especially if you're a Theology student. Or perhaps only if you're a Theology student.

WHAT YOU ALL THINK Pornography On The Internet

"There's a huge amount of pornographic material available on the Internet. Just yesterday I added another whole page of four-finger cum-shots to my web site."

Dr Laurence Phlegman, lecturer in Computer Science

"I think it is the University's duty to impose stricter regulations concerning both access to pornography on the Net and quality of pussy on display." Carodeen Spencer, Law student

"All students should be aware that, here at the Computer Help Desk, we can keep tabs on the Internet activities of any user... and spy on them in the shower." Gina Phee, Help Desk operator

"A simple typing error like 'Shitty Clit Spunk Whores' can lead you to filth so depraved it's beyond belief... It's frightening."

Salem Mackintosh, LUU Sweeping Officer

"You only have to visit a porn site once to find yourself on a sleazy mailing list. I'm still getting junk from the Chicken Splitters Home Page and I haven't visited their site for months."

Julian Wheranger, consultant in Communications Studies

Police, Camera, Action! - 8.30pm ITV

This is cult viewing at its finest. Laugh as minis reverse down motorway fast lanes, snigger as lorries terrorise Nissan Micras, giggle as a dog causes mayhem by releasing a hand brake, and split your sides as a joyrider gets chased through rush hour traffic, then tries to hide in a cinema. There's another reason to tune in: the doom-laden, overly dramatic tones of Alistair Stewart. "Of course, these are all different vehicles and different drivers, but they are all... White Van Man". Voiceovers don't get much better than this. If you're worried about the blood-and-guts aspect, don't be. Like that other classic show The A Team, no one ever dies on Police, Camera, Action!. Apply for your licence now. Jenny Wood

No! Change lanes! Put the handbrake on! Aaaaarrrggghhh!

Bio-Dome - 9pm Sky Movies 1

Cut this out and keep it, for this is the only good review of the film Bio-Dome that exists in the world. I'm not going to quibble about the plot. It's kind of hard to criticise something that doesn't really exist. Stephen Baldwin and Pauly Shore play a pair of slackers who find themselves locked inside a giant greenhouse as part of a scientific experiment. That's as far as the story goes, leaving plenty of room for manic slapstick, Kylie Minogue, fart gags galore and lines like "I haven't seen such destruction since the great chipmunk fire of 1979!". Nope, subtlety isn't on the cards here, but Baldwin and Shore are a hilarious improvisational team and seem to be laughing their asses off through the entire film. As will you. Ross Horsley

Strangelove @ The Duchess

Strangelove are back at The Duchess, again, this time in support of their fab new single "Another Night In" (released on 9 February, by Food/Parlophone Records). Now if this record doesn't make the top twenty then, well, the world will be losing out. To celebrate the release and gig we have a very special competition courtesy of the lovely people (no really, they're great) at FFI Beatwax Promotions. The Prize? A signed copy of the current album, a promo copy of "Another Night In", a huge and really lovely poster, a t-shirt, and a pair of tickets for the gig. Blimey! All you have to do is tell us the name of Strangelove's lead singer. Easy or what? The first person to call the competition hotline (243 4727) with the correct answer will bag the lot. Don't forget, if you don't win, you can get tickets for the gig from Jumbo Records or on the door, if still available. Joe Downie

Devil's Advocate @ Odeon Cinema

Odd film this. While Keanu Reeves gives perhaps the best 'straight' performance of his career, he still on occasion lapses into his 'amiable and confused' persona suggesting perhaps a patient director and a good editor. Charlize Theron (Two Days In The Valley), does well in the 'wife and victim' role, but is required to deliver some truly dire dialogue ("They've stolen my ovaries!") and, as a result, only just escapes with her credibility intact. It's a film that takes its time to establish mood and character, suggesting a sense of class, yet it ultimately wastes this in its refusal to do anything too interesting or dramatic. But if it has its flaws, and the most ludicrous ending in film history, it still remains entertaining. And Pacino more than compensates for most failings every time he's on screen. Chris Coates
